cc administration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly arthropathy-cc coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein.
CC The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition
CC of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous CC injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as CC being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding
CC CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1925-31, and mutations in CC this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-
CC arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial
CC hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF)
CC acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and CC joints in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be CC applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint-pain, CC loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence
CC represents the bovine orthologue of human MSF, superficial zone

This sequence was purified using a carrier which can couple wheat germ agglutinin and heparin to separate MPO. Fragments of this sequence (see AAR80039 and AAR80040) were used to produce the amplification primers shown in AAP04544 and AAP04545. The fragments amplified by these primers can then be used as probes to screen human cDNA libraries for MPO cDNA. The MPO cDNA can then be inserted into a plasmid which is used to transform cells to produce MPO. The MPO sequence is capable of promoting colony formation of megakaryocytes, enlarging the size of megakaryocytes and stimulating the proliferation of multipotential stem cells. The factor may be used for treating thrombocytopenia and hematocytopenia. The purification method can be used to isolate MPO from human urine or serums of patients with aplastic anaemia, and from animal blood or urine by radiation exposing the animals to induce aplastic anaemia.

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of CC alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide CC lubricating molety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 CC (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a CC human MSF-derived tribonectin; a blocompatible composition comprising a CC human MSF-derived tribonectin; a blocompatible composition comprising a CC of diagnosing osteoarthritis or a predisposition to osteoarthritis by CC measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a CC indicates the presence of or predisposition to developing CC osteoarthritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the CC treatment of osteoarthritis, where they may be used for lubricating CC mammalian joints, such as articulating joints of humans, dogs or horses. CT he tribonectin, when formulated as a membrane, foam, gel or fibre, is useful for inhibiting adhesion between two surfaces such as the injured CC insues of a mammal, where the injury is caused by a surgical insertion CC rationar, one of the surfaces is pericardial tissue. DNA encoding a tribonectin may be used in gene therapy. The present sequence represents cc a substantial portion of a human MSF-derived tribonectin.

These were derived from expressed sequence tags (ESTs) from the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, forensics, gene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess biodiversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is a protein of the invention.

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor: gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide lubricating modety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 repeats of a motif having at least 50% identity to the sequence KEDAPTT (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a

                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the administration of a composition comprising the camprodactyly-arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein. The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous injection. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as being megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-arthropathy.

The sequence covered by exons II, CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding cc terminating codon following exon IV. The cDNA sequence given contains cc (meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a cc encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to colony stimulating factor cc classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence cc encoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to classical mammalian protein secretion signal sequence. The sequence cc yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different ways to primary transcript of this gene may be cleaved in different ways to cc y and VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and cc are also implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the synegy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be completed in the processing or folding of the appropriate structure of the cellular matrix or extracellular matrix processing. Both naturally cccuring and non-naturally occuring MSF's may be characterised by with the exons spliced together in different to form different combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, which different in differing orders to form different combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, which matrix processing to the sequence in the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different combinations of alternatively spliced exons from this sequence, which the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different combinations of alternatively spliced exons to form this sequence.

RESA and FIRA have antigenicity suitable for providing protective immunity against Plasmodium falciparum malarial infections.

This novel 55 kDa protein is encoded by an open reading frame of a Mycobacterium tuberrulosis DNA fragment (see AAT95610) containing polymorphic GC-rich sequences. Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known proline-rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAW31851-57) are claimed. These can be produced as recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis

The specification describes a method for the CC identification of genes responsive to a specific mechanical stress. The CC method comprises applying the mechanical stress to an organism (tissue CC or cells comprises playing the mechanical stress to an organism (tissue CC fractions and extracting mRNA from them, and differentially analysing the CC mRNA in comparison with control samples. The method is used to identify CC genes whose expression is responsive to a specific stress. The identified CC genes are employed in determining risk associated with a physiological or CC disease state. The risk determination methods are used for testing a CC medicament for gene therapy. These medicaments, or genes identified by CC controlling a physiological or disease state (especially osteoporosis or CC controlling a physiological or disease state (especially osteoporosis or CC ts symptoms or other factors causing or contributing to osteoporosis or its symptoms or other conditions involved in mechanical stress or its hone develonment

Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known proline-rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAM31851-57) are claimed These can be produced as recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis tipfactions in humans or animals. The present invention relates to novel single exon nucleic acid probes (see AAI00010-AAI10067). The present sequence is a peptide encoded by one such probe. The probes are useful for measuring human gene expression in a human breast sample, where the probe hybridises at high stringency to a nucleic acid expressed in the human breast. The probes are useful for predicting, diagnosing, grading, staging, monitoring and prognosing diseases of the human breast, particularly those diseases with polygenic aetiology. The diseases include: breast cancer, disorders of development, Multimeric protein, especially enzymatic, complexes are held together CC by protein-protein interactions between domains designated dockerins CC and cohesins, which are found on the catalytic and scaffold subunits CC respectively. An example of such a complex is the cellulose degrading CC protein complex from Clostridium thermocellum, known as the cellulosome. CC This complex comprises around 15 proteins including endoglucanases, cellubiohydratases, hemicellulases, e.g. xylanases or lichinases, which CC interact with a central "scaffold" protein designated the cellulosome CC interact with the Cip subunit via conserved 23 amino acid dockerin CC interact with the Cip subunit via conserved 23 amino acid dockerin CC The invention relates to the isolation of proteins binding to a novel CC dockerin type domain found in the C-terminal portion of Cip. The new CC domain is designated a type II dockerin domain (as compared to the type CI I dockerin domain has some sequence similarity to the type II dockerin domain (as compared to the type CI I dockerin domain domain to the type II dockerin domains.

CC The sequence presented here is an example of a protein which binds CC The protein contains 4 type II cohesin domains in the N-terminal portion CC for which the first domain (amino acid residues 28-192) is thought to bind the first domain (amino acid residues 28-192) is thought to complexes, മ The novel type II dockerin and cohesin domains can be used s, especially enzyme complexes, to potentiate their catalytic a synergistic manner. synergistic

Anti-(I) antibodies and antagonists may also be used to down regulate TCAP expression and activity. The anti-(I) antibodies may also be used as diagnostic agents for detecting the presence of TCAPs in samples (e.g. by enzyme linked immunosorbant assay (ELISA)). AAI28460 to AAI29512 and AAM24494 to AAM24523 represent nucleotide and amino acid sequences given in the exemplification of the present invention.

CC The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous in the chromatory of the stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding CC ching megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF). The gene encoding CC CACP protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1q25-31, and mutations in CC this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-CC arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial CC hyperplasia without evidence of inflammation. CACP protein (MSF) CC acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and CC joints in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be CC applied to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, CC loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence CC represents the bovine orthologue of human MSF, superficial zone

The present invention describes colour cumports the polynucleotides (II) that encode them. (I) have cytostatic activity. (I) and (II) can be used in gene therapy and vaccine production. (I) and (II) may be used in the prevention, diagnosis and treatment of diseases CC associated with inappropriate colon tumour associated protein (TCAP) expression, such as colonic cancer. For example, (I) and (II) may be used to treat disorders associated with decreased expression by crectifying mutations or deletions in a patient's genome that affect the activity of TCAPs by expressing inactive proteins or to supplement the patients own production of them. Additionally, (II) may be used to produce the TCAP proteins, by inserting the nucleic acids into a host cell culturing the cell to express the protein. (II) and its complementary sequences may also be used as DNA probes in diagnostic polymerase chain reaction (PCR) and hybridisation assays to detect and therefore which patients may be in need of restorative therapy. (I) may be used as antigens in the production of antibodies against TCAPs

This sequence was purified using a carrier which can couple wheat germ agglutinin and heparin to separate MPO. Fragments of this sequence (see ARR80039 and AAR80040) were used to produce the amplification primers shown in AAP04544 and AAP04545. The fragments amplified by these primers can then be used as probes to screen human cDNA libraries for MPO cDNA. The MPO cDNA can then be inserted into a plasmid which is used to transform cells to produce MPO. The MPO sequence is capable of promoting colony formation of megakaryocytes, enlarging the size of megakaryocytes and stimulating the proliferation of multipotential stem cells. The factor may be used for treating thrombocytopenia and hematocytopenia.

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of CC alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide CC lubricating moiety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 CC (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a CC (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a CC human MSF-derived tribonectin; a blocompatible composition comprising a CC of diagnosing osteoarthritis or a predisposition to osteoarthritis by measuring the amount of MSF or its fragment in a biological sample of a condicates the presence of or predisposition to developing costeoarthritis. The tribonectin and DNA encoding it are useful in the CC mammalian joints, such as articulating joints of humans, dogs or horses. The tribonectin, when formulated as a membrane, foam, gel or fibre, is consected for inhibiting adhesion between two surfaces such as the injured CC or trauma, or an artificial device e.g., an orthopaedic implant. In comparity the surfaces is pericardial tissue. DNA encoding a tribonectin may be used in gene therapy. The present sequence represents a substantial portion of a human MSF-derived tribonectin.

These were derived from expressed sequence tags (ESTs) from the organism of interest. They can be used in diagnostics, forensics, gene mapping, identification of mutations, to assess biodiversity and for nutritional purposes. The present sequence is a

The invention relates to a human tribonectin which is a product of alternative splicing of the human MSF (megakaryocyte stimulating factor) gene. The tribonectin has at least one O-linked oligosaccharide lubricating modety and has a polypeptide sequence comprising 1-76 repeats of a motif having at least 50% identity to the sequence KEPAPTT (AAB29774). The invention also relates to a nucleic acid encoding a

                        The invention relates to a method of treating osteoarthritis via the cadministration of a composition comprising the camptodactyly-arthropathy-
CC coxa vara-pericarditis (CACP) protein, or portions of the CACP protein.
CC The composition may further comprise a local anaesthetic. The composition of the invention may be administered via intra-articular or intravenous composition. The human CACP protein is identified in the invention as composition to the invention as the protein (MSF) is located on chromosome 1925-31, and mutations in this gene are responsible for the heritable disorder camptodactyly-cc arthropathy-coxa vara-pericarditis, in which patients have synovial cc acts as a synovium lubricant, and can be used to lubricate tissue and composition in the treatment of osteoarthritis. The composition may be completed to reduce the symptoms of osteoarthritis (e.g., joint pain, cc loss of range of movement or joint damage). The present sequence is not given in its entirety in figure 4 of the cc specification, although a GenBank accession number was given. This credit is contained from GenBank (U70316).

The sequence given is a full length translation from the megakaryocyte CC III and IV encodes megakaryocyte stimulating factor (MSF) precursor. The sequence covered by exons II, compared by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding CC sequence is modified by the addition of an N-terminal sequence encoding CC a secretory leader, an initiating methionine proceeding exon II and a cc sequences derived from human megakaryocyte colony stimulating factor (MSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a cc (meg-CSF). Exon I contains the initiating methionine, and encodes a concoding the original meg-CSF includes exons II-IV and is thought to terminate in the region between amino acid residues 134 - 147. The cc yield a family of mRNA's each encoding a different ways to V and VI are thought to be related to the activity of the factor and cc molecule. These exons are also thought to play a role in the observed implicated in the stability, folding and processing of the cc synergy of MSF with other cytokines. Exons V - XII are believed to be culting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain cc the resulting factor, ie. one or more of these exons may contain cc sequences which direct proteolytic cleavage, adhesion, organisation of cocuring and non-naturally occuring MSF's may be characterised by with the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different of the exons spliced together in differing orders to form different cc

No. is the number of results predicted by chance to have a score greater than or equal to the score of the result being printed, and is derived by analysis of the total score distribution.

Its amino acid sequence shows a high proline content, but there is no homology to any known proline-rich antigens of mycobacteria. Novel M. tuberculosis

Novel M. tuberculosis proteins (see AAW31851-57) are claimed. These can be produced as recombinant proteins, especially in bacterial, yeast, fungal or higher eukaryote host cells, and used for diagnosing tuberculosis and other mycobacterial infections in humans or animals. The claimed proteins can also be used for epidemiological studies, for monitoring vaccination, and for the development of vaccines and
